A NICE LITTLE SCHEME.
Attempt to Lease All Reservation Mineral Lands.
THE INDIANS SIGN IT.
A Dollar a Ton Royalty on All Ores Mined.
The Reservation Lands Would Be Tied Up for Ten Years—A Wall Street Broker Back of It—Mining News.

One of the most stupendous deals ever conceived is the leasing, by an eastern syndicate, of all the mineral lands of the Utah and Uncompahgre reservations, which cover 10,680 square miles, or an area almost as large as Delaware, Rhode Island and Massachusetts combined.
The lease was signed on the part of the Indians at Oquirrh agency last Saturday, and the first information received in this city was through a garbled and misleading press dispatch from Washington. Mr. J. A. Swift of Fort Duchesne, who took some part in the negotiations, has just arrived in the city, and some idea of the magnitude of the deal may be obtained from his account.

HOW IT WAS NEGOTIATED.
"In the first place," said Mr. Swift, "it was a fair and square transaction and everything was above board. W. A. Perry came over from Denver and offered the Indians a royalty of $1 per ton on all ores of every description taken from the reservation for ten years. The Indians accepted and met at Oquirrh last Saturday. Major Waucho, the Indian agent, had nothing to do with it, except to ask them if they were willing to sign the lease. They all said they were, and all the chiefs signed it. Chiseta, the squaw of old Chief Oquirrh, who is dead, also signed it. Major Waucho immediately wrote a letter to Secretary Noble, stating what had been done, and Mr. Perry and United States Commissioner McConnell started for Washington to secure the approval of the interior department. They know as well as anyone that the lease is of no effect unless approved at Washington. No action has yet been taken by the authorities.

"I don't see why this lease wouldn't be a good thing for the Indians. It would give them a good many thousand dollars a year, and open up the rich asphaltum beds in the eastern part of the reservation."
IMMENSE PROFITS POSSIBLE.
To a disinterested observer it looks very much as though there were great deal more than asphaltum beds in this project. This reservation is known to be immensely rich in gold and silver. Prospectors who have run the gamut of Indian attacks have from time to time reported the existence of rich ledges of precious minerals. Who can estimate the value of a ten year's lease on all the mineral of this vast region, leaving the asphaltum beds entirely out of the question?
It simply amounts to an exclusive mining right to the thousand square miles of rich mineral lands.

Mr. Swift does not know what capitalists compose the syndicate, except that it is rich in gold and silver. Prospectors who have run the gamut of Indian attacks have from time to time reported the existence of rich ledges of precious minerals. Who can estimate the value of a ten year's lease on all the mineral of this vast region, leaving the asphaltum beds entirely out of the question?
It simply amounts to an exclusive mining right to the thousand square miles of rich mineral lands.

An Iron County Strike.
E. J. Edmonds is in receipt of a message from G. G. Davis from Silver city, stating that he had struck it rich in the Belmont lode, in Potosi-iron mining district, in Iron county. Mr. Davis was tunneling through the Belmont to get to his own ground when the strike was made. He reports a solid body of ore five feet wide, which will go all the way to the Belmont. The Belmont is the sole property of Mr. Edmonds. The ore is copper, ruby and native silver in character, and it is believed will be found to exist in large quantities. The formation is contact between trackyte and lime. Mr. Davis asked for orders regarding the ore, and in reply Mr. Edmonds will immediately send down ore sacks, and make a shipment as soon as possible. This strike is of such a character that today Mr. Edmonds is stopping high, only sitting the lofty places such as Pike's Peak as the Duke in the Cottonwoods.—Mining Journal.

THE HALE AND NOBROSS BOND.
The Two Million Dollar Undertaking Rejected by the Supreme Court.
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 17.—The supreme court today rejected the undertaking on appeal in the matter of the suit of M. W. Fox vs. the Hale & Nobross Silver Mining company, Alvin Hayward, estate of W. S. Hobart and others.
In this case Judge Hibbard gave judgment against the defendants in an amount exceeding $1,000,000. The undertaking on appeal was $2,000,000. This was duly filed and the only surety was the Western Safety and Guarantee company, with a capital stock of $100,000. Fox excepted to the sufficiency of this undertaking and asked that the court proceed to enforce its judgment by issuance of an execution, notwithstanding the undertaking filed on appeal by the defendants.
The defendants then applied to the supreme court for a writ of prohibition to restrain Judge Hobart from issuing an execution pending a determination of the appeal.
In its opinion the supreme court takes substantially the same ground taken by the plaintiff when he objected to the sufficiency of the undertaking. The court says, in effect, that a corporation having a paid up capital of only $100,000 manifestly cannot pay a loss of $2,000,000 any more than a legal person can. The application for a writ of prohibition was dismissed.
It is understood that the defendants will at once ask the supreme court to grant them permission to file a new bond.

A Mail Complaint.
A subscriber residing at Smithville, Millard county, Utah, complains strongly about insufficient mail service and has done so before. He has failed to receive papers sent to him from THE HERALD office and says he hardly gets more than half his papers. Even when he does they sometimes reach him open and torn. This is very provoking and something ought to be done by the postal authorities to remedy the evil.

THE SALT LAKE HERALD, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1893.
TALKS OF VARIOUS KINDS.
Bill Nye, Father Tatum and Dr. Uter Deliver Lectures.
BILL'S FUNNY BUSINESS.
Father Tatum, the Temperance Evangelist Addresses a Large Audience.

The city was lighted up yesterday by the benign countenance of William Edgar Nye, who enjoys the distinction of being the only great American Humorist.
Great as this country is, it will never accept more than one humorist at a time, and Nye is the name that is now most pronounced.
Mark Twain and a dozen others had their turn in the candle of fame, but they all flickered out as quick as they came. Nye knows this too well, and he is making the most of his day, for the American people will shelve its greatest favorites the moment they begin to grow stale and pick up a fresher subject for adulation.
Nye and Burbank put up at the Knott.

THE SANITARY CONVENTION.
Call issued for a Meeting of the Committees Tonight.
A meeting of the committees in the matter of the proposed sanitary convention will be held in the city hall this evening. Considerable interest is being taken in the scheme by the public and the members of the medical profession are strongly in favor of holding the convention at an early date as practicable.
It is proposed to invite all the large cities between the Missouri river and the Pacific coast to send delegates.
Sanitary matters in general will be discussed and the best methods to be adopted for protection against cholera and to arrange if possible a system of co-operation between all the large towns in the section participating in the convention.
The cost of entertaining the delegates will be small, and it will certainly give Salt Lake a splendid advertisement.

CALL FOR THE MEETING.
The following is the official call for the meeting tonight:
At a meeting of the city council, held on February 10, 1893, a resolution was passed, leading to the holding of a sanitary and quarantine convention to be held in this city sometime next month, in April or May, 1893. The resolution is as follows:
Whereas, it is of vital importance to the people of this city and the surrounding regions that vigorous quarantine and sanitary measures shall be established and enforced during 1893.
Resolved, That Salt Lake City hereby invites the municipal authorities of the cities having a population of more than 10,000 inhabitants and inter-mountain region to join this city in a convention to be composed of the health officers of said cities to be held in Salt Lake City during April or May, 1893.
Resolved, That the chamber of commerce and business men's association are hereby requested to appoint special committees to act with the mayor, president of the council, sanitary committee, health officer and board of health of the city, as a general committee of arrangements to have full power to issue invitations and arrange the details of the convention.

The committee will meet in the council chamber this evening at 7:30 p. m. for the arrangement of the necessary details. The persons to be present are as follows:
R. N. Baskin, mayor; C. F. Lofthouse, president of council.
Wonderland.
The new week opens up most auspiciously at this favorite resort. One of the best plays of the season, "Lost in London," is being presented by the popular stock company, with Mr. Crolius and Miss Darrah in the leading roles.
In the curio hall the Ogden triplets hold forth to large and admiring audiences.
Miss Koslos, in her painting, has proven a strong and drawing attraction. The usual children's matinee occurs today.

THE EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT.
Some People Appreciated the Jokes and Others Didn't.
Bill Nye is to the platform what the joker is to a game of cards—takes the trick. The people go to see Bill Nye and because it is Bill Nye laugh at anything and everything Bill Nye says. There were intelligent people who looked serious, missed the point of the jokes, who after looking around and seeing their neighbors laugh, would force a giggle or break out into a boisterous guffaw so as not to appear stupid. Those who enjoyed the jest, however, of last evening had made the acquaintance of the lecturer in his writings. They could see the play of his fetching humor, in his infectious smile, and in the twinkling of an eye, when Nye as a bald-headed imposter. But there were enough Nye people in the audience to carry things their way, and Edgewood William poked fun into their ears until they couldn't rest, and they set the whole house a chuckling.
Mr. Nye began by elucidating what American humor is, illustrating the bluntness of the Englishman's appreciation by a sample or two. "I once said," observed the humorist, "that Wagner's opera was much better than it sounded. The Englishman couldn't see any humor in that. I next tried the story of a man who took off his boots with the forks of the road. The Englishman looked mad, and replied: 'That is not humor, it is a damn lie.'"

The Nye people were kept in hilarious spirits by frequent humorous puns (theatricaly speaking, gags) such as after taking the stage, he said, "I am down." The pliant paria onthologist, which was heard near a year ago, is Nye's best story and was extremely funny; although it would be a danger of a dinner story. There were, however, no symptoms of a hoarse regret from having heard it. Nye is making decided advances in telling dialect jokes and his Norwegian story was capitally told.

MR. NYE'S PARTNER.
A. P. Burbank, who alternates the program with Mr. Nye, is a reader, or rather reciter, of some note, though his claims as a popular entertainer have never taken much hold on the people, his manner being stiff and prosy, lacking fire and spontaneity.
Mr. Burbank's forte is elocution and it is difficult to assign his doubling up with Mr. Nye except for the purpose of giving him points as to reading his own works. William is an apt pupil and in school boy oratory certainly surpassed his receptor.
The entertainment was given under the charge of the ladies of the Congregational church, and the audience was a refined and discriminating one, filling every seat of the orchestra floor with a good showing in the balconies.

A PRESS CLUB RECEPTION.
After the entertainment Messrs. Nye and Burbank visited the Press Club rooms, where representatives of the local press and a few invited guests were assembled. An hour or more was pleasantly passed. Mr. Nye related many stories reminiscent of the west and former visits to Salt Lake, and Mr. Burbank was equally entertaining. The cetera usual at such bohemian occasions were not wanting, and the Press club will not soon forget its distinguished guests.

LITERARY FORGERIES.
A Very Interesting Lecture by Dr. Uter Last Evening.
The lecture last evening at the Utah university was by Dr. Uter, on the subject of "Literary Forgeries." In treating it the doctor gave an account of a few of the most noted individuals who had palmed off writings of their own as the productions of others, and from the name of the author of the forgery. He perverted the names of the great authors and produced pecuniary and other benefits.
The three most prominent literary forgeries in English history were those of James Macpherson, Thomas Chatterton and William Henry Ireland.
Macpherson was a Scotchman, educated at the university of Aberdeen. He pretended to have discovered writings in the Gaelic language which he purported to have translated into English, and published as the poems of Ossian. He perpetrated a great number of similar frauds and on this basis built a name and acquired a fortune. He was a member of parliament and held government appointments in America under the British rule in the old colonial days.
He at one time made an effort to establish on a true and firmer basis his claim to fame by writing under his own name an introduction to a history of Great Britain, which was a failure, and the work was laughed at by the literary world.

Thomas Chatterton was born in 1752 at Bristol, England. He wrote a number of poems, which he claimed to be the poems of an ancient poet, and he was a very old literary fragments discovered in out of the way places. At the age of 17 he committed suicide.
William Henry Ireland was born in London and was the son of a dealer in antiquaries, some of which were manufactured by the son. His forgeries were mostly of Shakespearean order. Amongst others was a letter purporting to have been written by Queen Elizabeth to William Shakespeare, and one from the immortal Hamlet to his mother, and a letter of the poet's hair. The many forgeries of Ireland were discovered, and he later made a confession acknowledging the forgeries and admitting over the manner in which he had deceived the savants.
Anius Virbato, a Dominican monk, was also a clever manufacturer of ancient documents, and George Salmenezer, a supposed native of Japan, was a forger, who wrote a number of literary matter, and a Monsieur Schall did successful manipulations of that kind.
The doctor said that the best antidote to the knowledge that many of the plays attributed to Shakespeare were not really written by Shakespeare. The new Shakespeare society of London has come to the conclusion that the "King Henry VIII" was written by Beaumont and Fletcher. The German and other critics believe that many of the books of the bible were not written by whom their authorship is usually ascribed.

The lecture was one of the most interesting of the series and to literary people were exceedingly enjoyed. The next lecture of the course will be given by Professor T. B. Lewis on March 17. The subject is, "Is Civilization in the United States Improving?"

TEMPERANCE TALK.
A Large Audience Addressed by the Quaker Evangelist.
Father Tatum, the sturdy old Quaker temperance evangelist, held a rousing temperance meeting at the Assembly hall last evening. The audience was a large one and all present seemed to be fully in sympathy with the somewhat radical views of the principal speaker.
Father Tatum began by describing the effect of alcohol upon the system, and told how the tissues degenerated under its action. Its effect upon the moral nature, however, was even more marked. It was the liquor traffic which made the pauper, insane and criminal classes so formidable. Every year it diverted from proper channels millions of dollars. No man who uses liquor could make the most of life's opportunities. It was only ignorance and prejudice which prevented the solution of the liquor question. If the church people would unite, use all their social, political and educational influence, and stand firm, they could not fail to win. Every man and woman in Salt Lake should be willing to unite under the banner of temperance. The triumph of the great cause would solve the problem of capital and labor. He firmly believed that this evil would eventually be overthrown, and he hoped it would be buried face downward, so that the sun of it scratched the deeper it would be buried.
In conclusion the speaker besought the young men particularly to give up the use of liquor and tobacco.

A NARROW ESCAPE.
Con Sullivan, of Butte, Caught Under a Street Car.
His Head Was Wedged Under the Guard and the Car Had to Be Raised—Result of His Carelessness.
Con Sullivan, a miner from Butte City, had a narrow escape from death this evening.
It seems that Sullivan arrived here with a partner yesterday morning, and was bound for the San Juan country. At 7 o'clock last evening he was riding up Main street on a city railway car, and when about half a block south of Godbe's corner he jumped from the rear platform, alighting right in the center of the other track and directly in front of car No. 11, which was running south at a slow rate of speed.
Sullivan was knocked down by the car, and his head and shoulder passed under the guard. The motor was instantly reversed and the car stopped before it had gone three feet, and a large crowd of men immediately gathered around the car. It was found that Sullivan's head was firmly wedged under the guard and that the car would have to be raised before he could be extricated. A hundred willing hands quickly accomplished this, and Sullivan crawled out of his perilous position. He received some severe wounds on the head and his right leg was badly bruised, and the physicians say that, while he may be laid up for some days, his injuries are not serious at all.
Sullivan was somewhat under the influence of liquor when the accident occurred, and it was wholly due to his own reckless negligence. He is 32 years of age, unmarried, and said to be a man of some means.
